How to Get Free Contact Lenses (and Free Trials) by Mail

Can I Get Contacts for Free? (Yes, You Can)

How to Get Free Contact Lenses by Mail

Want to try contact lenses without paying a dime? You're in the right place. Whether you're switching from glasses, looking to try a new brand, or just want colored lenses for fun, this guide will show you exactly how to get free contact lens samples—sometimes delivered right to your door. It's easy with a free contact lenses trial and this article will show you how. It even works for people with astigmatism, like me (mine is extreme).

I've gotten free contacts many times. Let's break it down step-by-step.

The Best Free Contact Lens Trials are Available Right Now

Free contact lens trials aren't just marketing gimmicks — they're a smart way to test comfort, vision quality, and fit without paying full price. Many manufacturers and online retailers offer them, but they don't always promote them heavily.

Here are a few common options:

- Manufacturer websites – Brands like Acuvue, Biofinity, and Air Optix often have "free trial contact lenses" coupons you can print or show to your eye doctor.
- Online retailers – Some will ship a small supply when you provide a prescription.
- Optometrist promotions – Local offices sometimes run seasonal offers for contact lens free trial fittings.

Most of these still require a valid prescription, but they can save you the cost of a full box while you decide.

Free Contact Lenses by Mail — How It Works

Getting free contact lenses samples by mail is usually straightforward:

1. You sign up online through a brand or retailer.
2. They verify your prescription.
3. A trial pack is shipped directly to you.

The main benefit is convenience — no in-person pickup. Some promotions cover shipping, while others may ask for a small shipping fee. Keep in mind that “free” almost always means a limited supply (usually 5–10 days), not months’ worth of lenses.

Free Trial Contact Lenses for Astigmatism

If you have astigmatism (like I do), you’ll need toric lenses, which cost more and are trickier to fit. That’s why free trial contact lenses for astigmatism by mail are worth looking into — they let you confirm comfort and stability before committing to a full purchase.

Astigmatism means your eyes are more football-shaped instead of baseball-shaped. So those lenses need to sort of change your vision vertically. Toric contact lenses to correct astigmatism have small weights in the bottom so that the lenses line up correctly on your eye.

Look for these specifics:

- Brand variety – Not all companies offer free toric trials.
- Cylinder and axis options – Trials should match your exact prescription.
- Return or swap policies – Some promotions let you try a second brand if the first doesn’t work out.

Free Colored Contact Lenses Samples

Can you get colored contacts for free to change the color of your eyes? Maybe. They're considered more cosmetic, but if you do need vision correction, you might be able to get them.

Colored contacts are really about style as much as vision correction. Whether you want subtle enhancement or a dramatic color change, free colored contacts samples let you see how they look in real life — not just in an online photo.

Some brands also offer free trial colored contacts without seeing a doctor, but you still need to meet local prescription laws. In the U.S., for example, you can't skip the prescription entirely for safety reasons.

This is a common question, but in most countries, contact lenses are regulated medical devices. Even if you find a "no doctor" offer, it usually means they'll verify an existing prescription through your eye care provider rather than making you visit in person.

There are exceptions in certain countries, and some cosmetic-only colored lenses are sold without prescriptions, but that comes with risks — especially if you're ordering from unverified sellers.

Tips to Maximize Free Contact Lens Offers

- Sign up for multiple brand promotions — If you qualify, you can test different lenses back-to-back.
- Check both U.S. and international sites — Some ship worldwide.
- Watch for seasonal deals — Back-to-school, holidays, and World Sight Day often bring new offers.

Also, keep an eye on expiration dates for trials. Some promotions only run for a short period, and free contact lens trials can disappear without warning.

FAQs About Free Contact Lenses

How can I get free contacts online?

Look for manufacturer trial pages, online retailer promotions, and optometrist coupons. You'll need a valid prescription in most cases.

Do I need a prescription for free trial contacts?

In the U.S., yes. Even cosmetic colored contacts technically require one for safety reasons.

How long do free contact trials last?

Most trials provide a week to two weeks of wear, depending on the lens type.

Why Are Contact Lenses Free? What's the Catch?

Here's the big question: Why would a company give away free contacts?

Simple: it's smart marketing.

If you try a brand and like it, odds are good you'll buy it again. Contact lens manufacturers are banking on the long-term relationship, not the one-time sale. Giving out free contact lens trials is actually more cost-effective for them than spending a bunch on traditional advertising.

So no, there's no real "catch" here. It's not a scam. It's just how the industry works—and you can absolutely take advantage of it.

Two Easy Ways to Get Free Contact Lens Samples

1. Go Straight to the Manufacturer's Website

All the major contact lens brands offer free trial lenses through their websites. Here's how it works:

- Visit the brand's official site (links below).
- Find their "Free Trial" or "Free Sample" page.
- Fill out a quick form with your contact info.
- Print the trial certificate or email confirmation.
- Take that to your eye doctor.

Most forms don't take more than 2–3 minutes to fill out. And yes, you can do this for multiple brands to compare them.

Some top brands to check out:

- Acuvue (Johnson & Johnson)
- Air Optix (Alcon)
- Dailies (Alcon)
- Freshlook (colored lenses)
- CooperVision
- Soflens (Bausch & Lomb)
- PureVision2 (Bausch & Lomb)

2. Just Ask Your Eye Doctor

This might be the easier route. When you go in for an eye exam, ask your doctor if they have free trial lenses available. Many clinics keep samples in stock and can hand them out right away—especially for common prescriptions.

If they don't have what you need, they'll order it for you and it'll either be shipped to your home or available for pickup within a week or so.

You'll Need an Eye Exam (Here's Why)

Yes, even for free contact lenses, you need a valid prescription.

That means visiting a local eye doctor for a quick exam. A typical exam costs between $60 and $120—but this is a must for several reasons:

- Contact lenses are medical devices (by law).
- You need a proper prescription to get the right fit and power.
- The doctor may catch other issues with your eye health.

Look for optical departments inside stores like Walmart, Target, Sears, or JCPenney—they usually offer lower-cost exams.

Tip: Ask if they offer a free follow-up visit. Most do, and it's smart to check how your trial lenses are performing after a week or two.

What If You Have Astigmatism or Other Conditions?

Good news: You can still get free trial contacts if you have a special condition like astigmatism, presbyopia, or need multifocal lenses.

Just keep in mind:

- The selection might be more limited.
- Some samples may need to be ordered instead of handed out on the spot.
- You might go through a few brands or types before finding the perfect fit.

If you have astigmatism, your doctor will prescribe toric lenses. These special lenses have tiny weights in them to keep them properly aligned. Yes—they're also available in free trials from most brands.

Can You Get Free Colored Contacts?

Yes, you can!

Brands like Freshlook, Air Optix Colors, and Acuvue Define offer colored contacts in trial packs. Whether you want a subtle eye color enhancement or bold costume lenses for Halloween, there are options out there.

Important Note:

Even if you don't need vision correction, you still need a prescription. Why? Because contact lenses (even "plano" ones) are regulated medical devices. A proper fit keeps your eyes safe and comfortable.

Whatever you do—don't buy cheap knockoffs online without a prescription. Poorly made colored lenses have caused real damage, including blindness in some cases. Stick with name brands and always consult an eye doctor.

How to Keep Your Eyes (and Your Lenses) Happy

You got your trial lenses—nice!

Now let's make sure you take care of them properly. Here are a few golden rules:

- Clean lenses nightly using contact lens solution (never just saline unless rinsing).
- Replace your lens case every month or clean it thoroughly.
- Don't sleep in lenses unless they're made for extended wear.
- Don't use tap water on your lenses. Ever.
- Use clean, dry hands when inserting or removing lenses.

If you're new to contacts, watch a couple of YouTube videos on how to put them in and take them out. It's easier than you think, and you'll be a pro in no time.

Pro Tip: Try One Brand at a Time

It's tempting to try all the free samples at once… but slow your roll.

Try one brand for at least a week before moving on to the next. Keep a quick log or journal with notes like:

- Were they easy to put in/take out?
- How long before they felt dry?
- Did they feel comfortable?
- How was your vision clarity?

By the end, you'll know which brand works best—and you didn't pay a cent to figure it out.

Maximize Savings with Insurance and Flex Plans

If you have vision insurance, a Flexible Spending Account (FSA), or Health Savings Account (HSA), you can save even more. These typically cover:

- Eye exams
- Prescription lenses
- Contact lens solution and accessories

And since the money comes out before taxes, you're basically saving 20–30% off the top.

Final Thoughts: Don't Leave Free Lenses on the Table

If you wear contacts—or want to start—it makes total sense to try before you buy. Free trials are widely available and easy to get. You just need a current prescription and a few minutes to sign up.
